The phrase "eleventh hour" finds its earliest roots in religious texts, most notably the Christian Bible. The term originates from the Parable of the Workers in the Vineyard (Matthew 20:1-16), where workers hired at the eleventh hour (the final hour of the workday) receive the same wage as those who worked all day. This parable underscores themes of mercy, grace, and the possibility of salvation even at the last moment. Over time, the phrase transitioned from religious scripture into colloquial usage, symbolizing last-minute efforts or sudden resolutions. Its literary appearances further cemented its association with suspense and dramatic timing, as authors and playwrights employed it to heighten tension during critical moments.

Despite its widespread use, the phrase also carries an undercurrent of mystery—implying that something significant may occur just before an inevitable event, or that opportunities can be fleeting.
